

An unborn child is a human too

John Paul II

Thanks to the amazing technological progress the private life of foetus has been intruded upon (...). The fact that impregnation is the beginning of a new human life is no longer a matter of personal opinions or predilections but it needs to be taken for granted. From the moment of conception to the old age human nature of the new creature is not a metaphysical statement that can be questioned, but just the simple empirical fact.

Professor J. Lejeune, MD
Genetics Faculty, René Descartes University – Paris

Human life begins at the moment of conception, i.e. impregnation.

Professor R. Klimek, MD, the director of the Gynecology and Obstetrics Institute of the Medical Academy in Kraków, a member of the Scientific Committee of the International Federation of Gynecology and Obstetrics, the president of the Polish Gynecological Society

The human development is a continuous process from the moment of conception to death.

Professor M. Rybakowa, MD, president of the Committee for Human Development of the Polish Academy of Sciences

fol. A. Zachwieja

The face of a child around 5 months after conception